

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
9 CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
10

11 JENNIFER M. B., an Individual,

12 Plaintiff,

13 v.

14 ANDREW M. SAUL, Commissioner of 15 Social Security,

16 Defendant.

Case No.: 8:19-00153 ADS

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER
OF REMAND

17 I. INTRODUCTION

18 Plaintiff Jennifer M. B¹ (“Plaintiff”) challenges Defendant Andrew M. Saul², 19 Commissioner of Social Security’s (hereinafter “Commissioner” or “Defendant”) denial
20 of her application for a period of disability and disability insurance benefits (“DIB”).
21

22 ¹ Plaintiff’s name has been partially redacted in compliance with Federal Rule of Civil 23 Procedure 5.2(c)(2)(B) and the recommendation of the Committee on Court Administration and Case Management of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

24 ² The complaint, and thus the docket, do not name the Commissioner of Social Security.
On June 17, 2019, Saul became the Commissioner. Thus, he is automatically substituted as the defendant under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 25(d).

1 For the reasons stated below, the decision of the Commissioner is REVERSED and 2 REMANDED.

3 II. FACTS RELEVANT TO THE APPEAL

4 A review of the entire record reflects certain uncontested facts relevant to this 5 appeal. Prior to filing her application for social security benefits, Plaintiff last worked in 6 2014 performing inventory control for 3M. (Administrative Record “AR” 214, 221-26).³
 7 Her previous work experience also included waitressing, residential caregiving, serving 8 as a prison social worker, and a brief attempt to work for Lyft. (AR 68-69, 214, 221-26).
 9 At the administrative hearing, Plaintiff testified that she held several positions at 3M
 10 that all required manual labor, and she was eventually promoted to inventory. (AR 46-11 52). That job was the least demanding, but it still required her to pull heavy items off of 12 a fork truck, and move them to areas where she could count inventory. (AR 52). She 13 also had to roll powder barrels, weighing up to 500 pounds, from one area to another.
 14 (AR 52). She counted buckets, weighing 70 pounds or more, which she had to lift
 15 herself and move between shelves. (AR 52). Finally, she had to pull boxes out of “big 16 bins,” inventory, and return them to the bins. (AR 52). Sometimes she was required to 17 stand at the computer in the docks and do computer work, although she was never fully 18 trained for that because she had to leave for her back surgeries. (AR 52-53).

19 Plaintiff contends that she has been unable to work since 2015 due to her 20 collapsing spine, pain, and other issues associated with her degenerative back. (AR 46, 21 54, 67, 69). After her two back surgeries, 3M tried to accommodate her condition by 22

23 ³ Plaintiff’s certified earnings record indicates additional income from 3M in 2015 and 24 2016, but Plaintiff explained it was disability pay from that company. (AR 27-28 45, 74, 198, 200).

1 changing her chair and work environment, and she tried changing her lifestyle, but she
2 still had problems and the doctors recommended yet another surgery. (AR 46).

3 Plaintiff states that she has been struggling with her back for a long time and it
4 upsets her to talk about it. (AR 54, 66, 91). Her parents had histories with back
5 problems, but she didn't experience her issues until she was 40. (AR 54-55). It started 6 as a burning sensation in her foot, which lasted about a year. (AR 55). She saw various 7 foot doctors until they discovered she had an enlarged vertebra from arthritis
8 throughout her body. (AR 55). The enlarged vertebra ruptured a disc, and this caused 9 nerve problems which made her foot feel like it was "on fire." (AR 55).

10 Plaintiff had her first surgery in 2010, a laminotomy at L4-5. (AR 55).
11 Immediately after surgery, her foot stopped hurting, and she thought everything was 12 going to get better. (AR 55). She went back to light duty at work, but, by the end of that 13 first year, she stated she could no longer walk across a room. (AR 55).

14 That led to a spinal fusion in April 2017. (AR 55, 72). She had to fight with the 15 insurance companies to get the surgery approved. (AR 73). At one point, it was 16 approved, but then they denied it and told her to try physical therapy for three months,
17 have more MRIs and other tests done, and even take part in psychological therapy. (AR 18 72-73). Plaintiff contends that the insurance company strung her out for a year, causing 19 stress and anxiety. (AR 73). After it was finally approved and she had the second 20 surgery, her doctor told her not to go back to work. (AR 55-56). However, Plaintiff
21 states that she again returned to light duty because her employer wasn't going to pay her 22 if she didn't. (AR 55-56).

1 Plaintiff testified she tried to ignore her issues and hoped to get better, but she
2 can't recall a day in her 40s of not having back pain.⁴ (AR 56-57, 70). Finally, her pain
3 became so bad she could no longer ignore it. (AR 56). Her surgeon said she would need
4 yet another fusion, this time at L2-3. (AR 56). He explained to her that the pain would 5 never get better, and her condition would continue to degenerate, but the fusion could 6 fix just that place in her back. (AR 56). In the last nine years, she may have had only a 7 two-month period where she wasn't either needing back surgery, waiting for back 8 surgery, or healing from back surgery, and she "do[es]n't want to live like that 9 anymore." (AR 57).

10 Since her April 2017 surgery, Plaintiff states that she still has daily pain, but the 11 severity of the bad days and daily pain is less. (AR 60, 72). Last month, however, she 12 had more bad days than good; about two weeks out of the month were "bad" as a result 13 of new sciatic problems that didn't exist before surgery. (AR 60). If she "really bab[ies] 14 herself," she might only have one or two bad weeks. (AR 60). She stated was going to 15 physical therapy for her new problems, but she stopped when her insurance stopped
16 covering therapy. (AR 60, 63).

17 In lieu of another surgery and with her doctor's approval she's been doing Pilates
18 and exercises to strengthen her core. (AR 57). When she's not having nerve problems 19 and her sciatica isn't bothering her, she does her workout, which includes 40 minutes of 20 stretches and crunches that "emulate" what she was doing in physical therapy. (AR 57, 21 59). Currently, her doctor is waiting for her bones to solidify around the most recent 22 hardware so he can refer her to a pain-management specialist. (AR 57-59).

23
24 ⁴ Plaintiff turned 49 the day after she testified at the hearing. (AR 39, 57, 184).

1 To reduce pain, Plaintiff spends a lot of time lying horizontal or draped over an
2 exercise ball. (AR 60, 73, 90). She does the latter for about 20 minutes at a time, and it
3 relieves some of the pressure where she has the most pain. (AR 60-61). She also 4 performs “Child’s Pose”⁵ frequently, and she uses heat pads and ice packs. (AR 61).

5 Plaintiff spends most of her time at home. (AR 58). She cannot sit in normal 6 chairs because they lead to pain, so she has different spots set up with pillows for 7 comfort. (AR 58, 62). She cooks for her teenage son and drives him to school and 8 activities, and she can grocery shop but needs the groceries bagged lightly. (AR 58-60, 9 65-66). She can drive for about an hour, but she needs a brace to do that, and for sitting 10 long intervals and emergencies. Plaintiff contends the brace rubs and causes soreness in 11 other areas on her body. (AR 57, 61-62). She goes to dinner sometimes, but even that 12 can cause back pain for the days following. (AR 65). Her son does the bulk of anything 13 that requires lifting, such as taking out the garbage or doing laundry. (AR 58).

14 Recently, Plaintiff volunteered at the concession table for her son’s wrestling
15 meet. (AR 63, 65). She stood for two hours until she experienced a sharp pain, and the 16 whole next day was “pretty sad.” (AR 63).

17 Walking has always been her “therapy.” (AR 64). She used to walk three- to 18 three-and-a-half miles. (AR 64). Now, due to her back, she becomes sore suddenly and 19 needs to return home. (AR 64). She still walks, when she is up for it, but she stays near 20 home. (AR 64).

21
22
23 ⁵ The Child’s Pose is a stretch that helps the back and muscles around the hips. See 24 <https://www.mayoclinic.org/healthy-lifestyle/stress-management/multimedia/childs-pose/vid-20453580> (last visited June 5, 2020).

1 Plaintiff takes a muscle relaxer and pain medication, but only in emergencies
2 because of the side effects. (AR 64-65). When she takes her pain medications, and then
3 stops, she experiences headaches. (AR 64). Sometimes taking her muscle relaxer and 4 then alternating hot and cold packs for a few hours will “really kind of take the edge off.”
5 (AR 65).

6 Plaintiff states can sit for about an hour and a half before her back becomes 7 painful. (AR 69). If she sits for too long, she can’t do normal things, like get on the 8 toilet. (AR 69). When she hurts herself, it can affect her for days. (AR 70). Everything 9 creaks, and she moves slowly. (AR 70). She can stand for only a few minutes before she 10 must stretch, try to bend, and do other things—like pull her knee to her chest—to 11 alleviate her pain. (AR 70.) When she sleeps, her back always hurts. (AR 70-71). She 12 states that she hasn’t had normal REM sleep in years. (AR 71). This causes fatigue, and 13 she alternates between exhaustion and manic alertness during the day. (AR 71). Her 14 pain fluctuates from a level three to ten. (AR 70).

15 Plaintiff tried to work for Lyft in September and October to help pay for her
16 medical bills, but she was unable to do it for enough hours to compensate for the vehicle
17 Lyft rented for her. (AR 68). Working for Lyft caused sciatic pain in her back and down
18 her leg, and soreness that crept up her back. (AR 68). She also experienced sharp pains
19 and tenderness that made her tear up. (AR 69).

20 Plaintiff does not feel as if she has healed. (AR 63). She states that she has lost
21 over thirty percent of her flexibility. (AR 63). Her legs and buttocks have not recovered 22 from the last surgery. (AR 63, 74). She’s had to adapt her whole life around slowing the 23 degeneration in her back. (AR 63). Her surgeon also does not believe she’s healed, and 24 he has advised her not lift anything over 10 pounds, bend, reach, or sit for extended

1 periods of time. (AR 58-59, 63, 74). Her surgeon's physician assistant does not think
 2 Plaintiff "belong[s] in the work force." (AR 74). Plaintiff believes any work activity
 3 would further hurt or injure her. (AR 67). She can't imagine doing anything six hours a 4 day, let alone eight. (AR 67, 90).

5 III. PROCEEDINGS BELOW

6 A. Procedural History

7 Plaintiff protectively filed her claim for Title II social security benefits on 8 November 2, 2015, alleging disability beginning August 15, 2015. (AR 25, 184-85).
 9 Plaintiff's DIB application was denied initially on March 7, 2016 (AR 103), and upon 10 reconsideration on June 3, 2016 (AR 116). A hearing was held before ALJ Susanne M.
 11 Cichanowicz on February 6, 2018. (AR 41-92). Plaintiff, represented by counsel,
 12 appeared and testified at the hearing, as well as vocational expert Joseph Torres. (AR 13 41-92).

14 On March 20, 2018, the ALJ found Plaintiff was "not disabled" within the 15 meaning of the Social Security Act.⁶ (AR 25-34). The ALJ's decision became the 16 Commissioner's final decision when the Appeals Council denied Plaintiff's request for 17 review on December 10, 2018. (AR 1-6). Plaintiff then filed this action in District Court
 18 on January 25, 2019, challenging the ALJ's decision. [Docket ("Dkt.") No. 1].

19 The case is ready for decision.⁷

21 ⁶ Persons are "disabled" for purposes of receiving Social Security benefits if they are 22 unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity owing to a physical or mental 23 impairment expected to result in death, or which has lasted or is expected to last for a continuous period of at least 12 months. 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(1)(A).

24 ⁷ The parties filed consents to proceed before the undersigned United States Magistrate
 Judge, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), including for entry of final Judgment. [Dkt. Nos.
 7, 10].

B. Summary of ALJ Decision After Hearing

In the ALJ's March 20, 2018 decision (AR 25-34), the ALJ followed the required five-step sequential evaluation process to assess whether Plaintiff was disabled under the Social Security Act.⁸ 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520(a)(4). At step one, the ALJ acknowledged that Plaintiff's 3M earnings after the August 15, 2015 alleged onset date were for disability payments rather than work activity, as Plaintiff testified, and found that Plaintiff's work for Lyft was not sufficient to rise to substantial gainful activity. (AR 27-28). Accordingly, the ALJ found that Plaintiff had not engaged in substantial gainful activity since her alleged onset date. (Id.) At step two, the ALJ found that Plaintiff had the following severe impairment: lumbar degenerative disc disease, status/post laminotomy and two fusions. (AR 28). At step three, the ALJ found that Plaintiff "does not have an impairment or combination of impairments that meets or medically equals the severity of one of the listed impairments in 20 CFR Part 404, Subpart P, Appendix 1 (20 CFR 404.1520(d), 404.1525[,], and 404.1526)." (AR 28).

⁸ The ALJ follows a five-step sequential evaluation process to assess whether a claimant is disabled: Step one: Is the claimant engaging in substantial gainful activity? If so, the claimant is found not disabled. If not, proceed to step two. Step two: Does the claimant have a "severe" impairment? If so, proceed to step three. If not, then a finding of not disabled is appropriate. Step three: Does the claimant's impairment or combination of impairments meet or equal an impairment listed in 20 C.F.R., Pt. 404, Subpt. P, App. 1? If so, the claimant is automatically determined disabled. If not, proceed to step four. Step four: Is the claimant capable of performing her past work? If so, the claimant is not disabled. If not, proceed to step five. Step five: Does the claimant have the residual functional capacity to perform any other work? If so, the claimant is not disabled. If not, the claimant is disabled. Lester v. Chater, 81 F.3d 821, 828 n.5 (9th Cir. 1995) (citing 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520); see also Ford v. Saul, 950 F.3d 1141, 1148-49 (9th Cir. 2020).

1 The ALJ then found that Plaintiff had the Residual Functional Capacity (“RFC”)⁹
 2 to perform sedentary work as work as defined in 20 C.F.R. § 404.1567(a)¹⁰ with the 3 following additional limitations:

4 [Plaintiff] can occasionally balance, stoop, and climb ramps or stairs;
 5 she cannot kneel, crouch, crawl, or climb ladders, ropes or scaffolds; 6 and she must be allowed to alternate between sitting and standing at will, while remaining on task.

7 (AR 28-32).

8 At step four, based on Plaintiff’s vocational background, testimony, earnings
 9 record, and the vocational expert’s testimony, the ALJ found that Plaintiff was unable to 10 perform her past relevant work as an industrial cleaner, production machine attendant, 11 packer, or stock control clerk. (AR 32).

12 At step five, the ALJ found that, “[c]onsidering [Plaintiff]’s age, education, work 13 experience, and [RFC], there are jobs that exist in significant numbers in the national 14 economy that [she] can perform.” (AR 33). The ALJ accepted the vocational expert’s
 15 testimony that Plaintiff would be able to perform the representative occupations of: lens
 16 installer (Dictionary of Occupational Titles (“DOT”) 713.687-026); assembler (DOT

17
 18 ⁹ An RFC is what a claimant can still do despite existing exertional and nonexertional
 19 limitations. See 20 C.F.R. § 404.1545(a)(1).

20 ¹⁰ “Sedentary work” is defined as 21 lifting no more than 10 pounds at a time and occasionally lifting or 22 carrying articles like docket files, ledgers, and small tools. Although a sedentary job is defined as one which involves sitting, a certain amount of walking and standing is often necessary in carrying out job duties. Jobs are sedentary if walking and standing are required occasionally and other sedentary criteria are met.

23 20 C.F.R. § 404.1567(a); see also Casey H. v. Berryhill, 2018 WL 5629303, at *3 n.3
 24 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 29, 2018).

739.687-066); and table worker (DOT 739.687-182). (AR 33-34). As such, the ALJ found that Plaintiff was “not disabled,” as defined in the Social Security Act, from August 15, 2015, through the date of the ALJ’s decision. (AR 34).

IV. ANALYSIS

A. Issues on Appeal

Plaintiff raises three issues for review: (1) whether the ALJ properly considered her subjective allegations regarding her pain and limitations; (2) whether the ALJ properly considered the State Agency opinions; and (3) whether new and material evidence supports remand. [Dkt. No. 16 (Joint Stipulation), p. 2]. For the reasons below, the Court agrees with Plaintiff regarding the ALJ’s failure to properly consider her subjective testimony, and remands on that ground.

B. Standard of Review

A United States District Court may review the Commissioner’s decision to deny benefits pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). The District Court is not a trier of the facts but is confined to ascertaining by the record before it if the Commissioner’s decision is based upon substantial evidence. Garrison v. Colvin, 759 F.3d 995, 1010 (9th Cir. 2014) (District Court’s review is limited to only grounds relied upon by ALJ) (citing Connett v. Barnhart, 340 F.3d 871, 874 (9th Cir. 2003)). A court must affirm an ALJ’s findings of fact if they are supported by substantial evidence and if the proper legal standards were applied. Mayes v. Massanari, 276 F.3d 453, 458-59 (9th Cir. 2001).

“[T]he Commissioner’s decision cannot be affirmed simply by isolating a specific quantum of supporting evidence. Rather, a court must consider the record as a whole, weighing both evidence that supports and evidence that detracts from the Secretary’s conclusion.” Aukland v. Massanari, 257 F.3d 1033, 1035 (9th Cir. 2001) (citations and

1 internal quotation marks omitted). “Where evidence is susceptible to more than one
 2 rational interpretation,’ the ALJ’s decision should be upheld.” Ryan v. Comm’r of Soc.
 3 Sec., 528 F.3d 1194, 1198 (9th Cir. 2008) (citing Burch v. Barnhart, 400 F.3d 676, 679 4 (9th Cir. 2005)); see Robbins v. Soc. Sec. Admin., 466 F.3d 880, 882 (9th Cir. 2006) (“If 5 the evidence can support either affirming or reversing the ALJ’s conclusion, we may not 6 substitute our judgment for that of the ALJ.”). However, the Court may review only “the 7 reasons provided by the ALJ in the disability determination and may not affirm the ALJ
 8 on a ground upon which [s]he did not rely.” Orn v. Astrue, 495 F.3d 625, 630 (9th Cir.
 9 2007) (citation omitted).

10 C. The ALJ Failed to Properly Consider Plaintiff’s Subjective 11 Complaints

12 Plaintiff asserts that the ALJ improperly evaluated her subjective testimony
 13 regarding her pain and limitations. Defendant contends that the ALJ appropriately
 14 found Plaintiff’s testimony not fully supported by the record, and Plaintiff’s
 15 disagreement with the ALJ is not evidence of error.

16 1. Legal Standard for Evaluating Claimant’s Testimony

17 A claimant carries the burden of producing objective medical evidence of his or 18 her impairments and showing that the impairments could reasonably be expected to 19 produce some degree of the alleged symptoms. Benton ex rel. Benton v. Barnhart, 331
 20 F.3d 1030, 1040 (9th Cir. 2003). Once the claimant meets that burden, medical 21 findings are not required to support the alleged severity of pain. Bunnell v. Sullivan,
 22 947 F.2d 341, 345 (9th Cir. 1991) (en banc); see also Light v. Soc. Sec. Admin., 119 F.3d 23 789, 792 (9th Cir. 1997) (“claimant need not present clinical or diagnostic evidence to 24 support the severity of [her] pain”) (citation omitted)).

1 Once a claimant has met the burden of producing objective medical evidence, an 2 ALJ can reject the claimant's subjective complaint "only upon (1) finding evidence of 3 malingering, or (2) expressing clear and convincing reasons for doing so." Benton, 331
 4 F.3d at 1040; Brown-Hunter v. Colvin, 806 F.3d 487, 489 (9th Cir. 2015) ("we require 5 the ALJ to specify which testimony she finds not credible, and then provide clear and 6 convincing reasons, supported by evidence in the record, to support that credibility
 7 determination"); Laborin v. Berryhill, 867 F.3d 1151, 1155 (9th Cir. 2017).

8 The ALJ may consider at least the following factors when weighing the claimant's 9 credibility: (1) his or her reputation for truthfulness; (2) inconsistencies either in the 10 claimant's testimony or between the claimant's testimony and his or her conduct; (3) his 11 or her daily activities; (4) his or her work record; and (5) testimony from physicians and 12 third parties concerning the nature, severity, and effect of the symptoms of which she 13 complains. Thomas v. Barnhart, 278 F.3d 947, 958-59 (9th Cir. 2002) (citing Light, 119 14 F.3d at 792). "If the ALJ's credibility finding is supported by substantial evidence in the 15 record, [the court] may not engage in second-guessing." Id. at 959 (citing Morgan v.
 16 Apfel, 169 F.3d 595, 600 (9th Cir. 1999)).

17 2. The ALJ Failed to Provide Clear and Convincing Reasons Supported by 18 Substantial Evidence

19 Having carefully reviewed the record, the Court finds that the ALJ failed to 20 articulate specific clear and convincing reasons for discounting Plaintiff's testimony.¹¹
 21 The ALJ found Plaintiff's various statements of record about her impairments, activities, 22

23 ¹¹ The ALJ did not make a finding of malingering in her opinion. Thus, in discounting 24 Plaintiff's subjective complaints, the ALJ was required to articulate specific, clear and convincing reasons. See Benton, 331 F.3d at 1040; Brown-Hunter, 806 F.3d at 489.

1 and the intensity, persistence, and limiting effects of her symptoms “generally
2 consistent” with her testimony. (AR 29). The ALJ also found her medically 3 determinable impairments could reasonably be expected to cause her alleged symptoms.
4 (Id.). However, the ALJ nonetheless discounted Plaintiff’s subjective complaints based 5 on her reporting less-severe pain after surgery, her daily activities, and because her 6 testimony was not consistent with the objective medical evidence. (AR 29-32).

7 First, the ALJ improperly faulted Plaintiff regarding her hearing testimony about 8 her condition after surgery. (AR 30). The ALJ specifically noted Plaintiff’s testimony
9 that her pain was less severe and she had fewer “bad days” than prior to surgery. (AR
10 30). While the ALJ could consider medical improvement, here, it’s an insufficient
11 reason to discount the testimony. Plaintiff’s candid acknowledgment of slight post-
12 surgical improvement, (AR 60, 72), is not necessarily inconsistent with her testimony
13 that she still experiences disabling pain and related symptoms even after the procedure
14 (AR 60, 72 (explaining that her pain before surgery wasn’t “that different” from her pain 15 now). See, e.g., Hernandez v. Astrue, 2009 WL 56760, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 6, 2009) 16 (claimant’s acknowledgment that symptoms improved with treatment are not 17 necessarily inconsistent with allegations of a disabling impairment). Moreover, she 18 estimated about half the month was still “bad” as a result of new sciatic problems that 19 arose after surgery, and she testified her doctor said her back will continue to 20 degenerate and the pain will never go away. (See AR 56, 58-59, 63, 74). There is 21 nothing inherently inconsistent about that testimony, at least such that it meets the 22 clear and convincing standard. See Benton, 331 F.3d at 1040; Neyman-Reese v.
23 Berryhill, 2018 WL 1336048, at *8 (D. Or. Mar. 13, 2018) (even though claimant
24 testified her condition improved, and the record unequivocally reflected improvement,

1 symptom abatement was not a clear and convincing reason to discount subjective
 2 complaints because claimant continued to experience symptoms of her “lifelong
 3 condition”); Hernandez, 2009 WL 56760 at *7 (even though record supported ALJ’s
 4 finding that condition improved with medication and therapy, ALJ improperly rejected 5 claimant’s credibility because claimant explained the improvement was only partial and 6 he still suffered significant symptoms).

7 Second, the ALJ pointed to Plaintiff’s testimony that she walked regularly and, on 8 “most days,” she completed 40 minutes of physical therapy-type exercise, and then 9 listed a number of other activities, including cooking, driving her son to school and 10 activities, going to dinner “sometimes,” and shopping for groceries. (AR 30). The ALJ 11 found that “her described activities do not support the severity of her alleged pain and 12 functional restrictions.” (AR 30). This is insufficient for several reasons. Plaintiff’s 13 testimony that she followed treatment recommendations and attempted to get better by 14 walking and exercising, (see AR 57 (Plaintiff’s explanation that she partakes in her 15 previously “approved” physical-therapy exercises with her doctor’s “blessing”), 59 (“I 16 follow all of my doctor’s instructions.”), 375 (treating physician’s letter to insurance
 17 company indicating Plaintiff “has been doing a daily home exercise program”), is a 18 reason to credit Plaintiff, not a convincing reason to doubt her complaints.¹² Cf. Molina 19 v. Astrue, 674 F.3d 1104, 1112 (9th Cir. 2012) (“the ALJ may consider . . . unexplained or 20 inadequately explained failure . . . to follow a prescribed course of treatment”); see 20 21 C.F.R. § 404.1530 (claimants must “follow treatment prescribed by [their] medical 22 source(s) if this treatment is expected to restore [their] ability to work”); Garcia v.

23 24 ¹² Notably, and inconsistently, the ALJ later found that Plaintiff’s “expressed desire to avoid another surgery is certainly reasonable . . .” (AR 31).

1 Berryhill, 2017 WL 942903, at *5 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 10, 2017) (claimant's testimony that
2 she walked twice a week and stretched daily is evidence she followed treatment
3 recommendations, not a valid reason supported by substantial evidence for discounting
4 her statements).

5 More importantly, while the ALJ listed other activities in addition to walking and 6 exercising, such as driving, cooking, eating, and grocery shopping, the Ninth Circuit has 7 "repeatedly warned that ALJs must be especially cautious in concluding that daily 8 activities are inconsistent with testimony about pain, because impairments that would 9 unquestionably preclude work and all the pressures of a workplace environment will 10 often be consistent with doing more than merely resting in bed all day." Garrison, 759 11 F.3d at 1016; Vertigan v. Halter, 260 F.3d 1044, 1050 (9th Cir. 2001) ("This court has 12 repeatedly asserted that the mere fact that a plaintiff has carried on certain daily 13 activities, such as grocery shopping, driving a car, or limited walking for exercise, does 14 not in any way detract from her [testimony] as to her overall disability."). "[O]nly if 15 [the] level of activity [was] inconsistent with [a claimant's] claimed limitations would . . .
16 activities have any bearing on . . . [subjective testimony]." Garrison, 759 F.3d at 1016.
17 Moreover, the ALJ failed to make requisite findings as to the application of any of 18 Plaintiff's activities to the work setting. See Martinez v. Berryhill, 721 F. App'x 597, 600
19 (9th Cir. 2017) (ALJ improperly discounted testimony "based on [claimant's] daily 20 activities . . . [without] support[ing] the conclusions as to the frequency of those 21 activities or their transferability to the workplace."); Orn, 495 F.3d at 630 (ALJ must 22 make "specific findings related to [the daily] activities and their transferability to 23 conclude that a claimant's daily activities warrant an adverse credibility 24

1 determination"). Accordingly, the second reason for discounting Plaintiff's testimony is
2 not clear or convincing.

3 The remaining reason provided by the ALJ is also insufficient. On at least three 4 occasions, the ALJ referenced the same justification for doubting Plaintiff's complaints:
5 the lack of support in the objective medical evidence of record. See AR 30 (finding 6 Plaintiff's statements were "not entirely consistent with the medical evidence"), 30 (the 7 "objective evidence in the record and [Plaintiff's] surgical history demonstrate that [she]
8 has back related functional limitations, but they do not fully support her allegations");
9 34 ("relevant evidence in the record . . . does not generally support [Plaintiff]'s
10 statements"). However, because the ALJ did not provide any other clear and convincing
11 reason for discounting the subjective complaints, reliance on a conflict with objective
12 evidence alone is not a sufficient basis to support the credibility determination. See 13 Burch, 400 F.3d at 681 (lack of objective medical evidence to support subjective 14 symptom allegations cannot form the sole basis for discounting pain testimony); 15 Dschaak v. Astrue, 2011 WL 4498835, at *1 (D. Or. Sept. 27, 2011) ("[O]nce the[] other
16 bases for the ALJ's decision were discarded as erroneous, the ALJ's credibility
17 determination could not rely solely on conflicts with the medical evidence."). The ALJ's
18 summary of the medical evidence is not sufficient to support the finding. See Brown-19 Hunter, 806 F.3d at 494 (credibility determination insufficient when ALJ "simply 20 state[s] her non-credibility conclusion and then summarize[s] the medical evidence").

21 The Court thus concludes the ALJ committed error in discounting Plaintiff's 22 testimony without a clear and convincing explanation supported by substantial 23 evidence. In this instance, the Court cannot conclude that the ALJ's error was harmless.
24 See, e.g., Id. at 492-93 (ALJ's failure adequately to specify reasons for discrediting

1 claimant testimony “will usually not be harmless”). In light of the significant functional
 2 limitations reflected in Plaintiff’s subjective statements, the Court cannot “confidently
 3 conclude that no reasonable ALJ, when fully crediting the [Plaintiff’s] testimony, could 4 have reached a different disability determination.” Stout v. Comm’r, Soc. Sec. Admin., 5 454 F.3d 1050, 1055-56 (9th Cir. 2006).

6 D. The Court Declines to Address Plaintiff’s Remaining Arguments

7 Having found that remand is warranted, the Court declines to address Plaintiff’s
 8 remaining arguments. See Hiler v. Astrue, 687 F.3d 1208, 1212 (9th Cir. 2012)
 9 (“Because we remand the case to the ALJ for the reasons stated, we decline to reach
 10 [plaintiff’s] alternative ground for remand.”); see also Alderman v. Colvin, 2015 WL 11 12661933, at *8 (E.D. Wash. Jan. 14, 2015) (remanding in light of interrelated nature of 12 ALJ’s decision to discount claimant’s credibility and give appropriate consideration to 13 physician’s opinions, step-two findings, and step-five analysis); Augustine ex rel.
 14 Ramirez v. Astrue, 536 F. Supp. 2d 1147, 1153 n.7 (C.D. Cal. 2008) (“[The] Court need 15 not address the other claims plaintiff raises, none of which would provide plaintiff with 16 any further relief than granted, and all of which can be addressed on remand.”).
 17 Because it is unclear, in light of these issues, whether Plaintiff is in fact disabled, remand 18 here is on an “open record.” See Brown-Hunter, 806 F.3d at 495; Bunnell, 336 F.3d at 19 1115-16. The parties may freely take up all issues raised in the Joint Stipulation, and any 20 other issues relevant to resolving Plaintiff’s claim of disability, before the ALJ.

21 E. Remand For Further Administrative Proceedings

22 Remand for further administrative proceedings, rather than an award of benefits,
 23 is warranted here because further administrative review could remedy the ALJ’s errors.
 24 See Brown-Hunter, 806 F.3d at 495 (remanding for an award of benefits is appropriate

1 in rare circumstances). The Court finds that the ALJ failed to properly evaluate 2 Plaintiff's subjective complaints. On remand, the ALJ shall properly review and 3 evaluate Plaintiff's pain testimony and reassess Plaintiff's RFC. The ALJ shall then 4 proceed through steps four and five, if necessary, to determine what work, if any,
5 Plaintiff is capable of performing.

6 V. ORDER

7 IT IS ORDERED that Judgment shall be entered REVERSING the decision of the 8 Commissioner denying benefits, and REMANDING the matter for further proceedings
9 consistent with this Order. Judgement shall be entered accordingly.

10
11 DATE: September 23, 2020

12
13 /s/ Autumn D. Spaeth
14 THE HONORABLE AUTUMN D. SPAETH
15 United States Magistrate Judge
16
17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24